Investment Objective

The fund seeks current income, capital preservation, and capital gains with a long-term, conservative investment philosophy in mind. Its portfolio is invested mainly in large-cap U.S. common stocks.

Fund Highlights

- Adams Diversified Equity Fund (ADX) is known for its long operating history and consistent record of shareholder distributions. The fund has been listed on the New York Stock Exchange since 1929, making it one of the oldest companies on the exchange. The fund has paid distributions without interruption since 1935.
- We view the fund as having a conservative philosophy for an equity strategy. It invests in a diversified portfolio of predominately large-cap U.S. companies. Furthermore, ADX does not use any leverage in its portfolio.
- The weighted median market cap of companies in ADX's portfolio was $96.4b as of 3/31/17. Separately, 96% of the portfolio was invested in U.S.-based companies.
- The fund reported that it repurchased 237,861 shares during the first quarter of 2017. To some extent, this helped to slightly offset a portion of the fund's issuance of shares as payment of its year-end distribution in the fourth quarter of 2016.
- During the first quarter, technology stocks were some of the strongest contributors to portfolio performance while energy was the most significant detractor. Notably, the managers increased their exposure to capital goods companies in the industrials sector as well as to U.S. REITs with the belief that the sector has been oversold in reaction to the prospect of higher interest rates¹.
- Buying shares of a closed-end fund at a large discount offers investors three primary benefits, in our opinion: (1) shares can be purchased at a less expensive price than the underlying portfolio, (2) investors receive a higher distribution rate on a share price basis than the rate that is actually generated by the portfolio, and (3) evidence indicates that fund share prices are less volatile relative to the NAV at wider discount levels.
